THE DENTIST SAYS:

ERNEST J. TARR, D.D.S.

OVERCOMING NEW DENTURE SPEECH PROBLEM

QUESTION—
"Since receiving my new set of dentures I have had trouble in my speech. What can I do to overcome this difficulty?" . . . asks Mr. R. L. S. of Torrance.

ANSWER—
After receiving a new set of dentures, most people are surprised to find that they have difficulty in speaking, or they may find themselves lisping. This is a very common thing because the dentures have altered the shape of the mouth.

As soon as the tongue, lips and cheeks become accustomed to the change, the difficulty is usually very easily overcome. However, if one seems to be having more difficulty than he thinks he should have, he should practice reading aloud. When he comes to a word or letter than is difficult to pronounce, he should repeat it over and over again until the word or letter is mastered. Practicing to speak before a mirror is also very helpful.
